SUPPLEMENT
TO THE LONDON GAZETTE,
TUESDAY, JULY 11.

An account of the Battle fought near Aspern, on the Marchfield, on the 21st and 22d of May, 1809, between the archduke Charles of Austria, generalissimo of the Imperial Austrian armies, and the emperor Napoleon, commander in chief of the French and allied armies.

BATTLE OF THE 21st MAY.

FIRST COLUMN.

The advanced guard under general Nordman consisting of two battalions of Gyulay and Litchtenstein hussars, had formed near the destroyed bridge of Tabor, and leaving the villages of Kahn and Hirschitten to the the left, and Stadlau to the right, marched in the plain towards Aspern.

It was followed by the column, which having left the road before the post-office at Stammersdorf, had marched from the right by half divisions. Its right flank along the Danube was covered by a battalion of St. Georgians, by the first battalion of Vienna volunteers, and by a battalion of militia, under the command of major count Colloredo.

Within a cannon shot of Stadelan, the out posts met the enemy's piquets, which gradually retreated to their original divisions.

At this time gen. Nordman ordered two battalions of Gyulay to draw up ex echellon, in order to favor the advance of the column. The enemy, drawn up in large divisions, stood immediately before Aspern, having, to cover his front, occupied all the ditches of the fields, which afforded excellent breast-works. His right was covered by a battery, and his left by a broad and deep ditch, (one of those that carry off the waters of the Danube when it overflows) as well as by a bushy ground, which was occupied by several bodies in close order.

Though the enemy had advantage of position all to himself, inasmuch as the freshes of the Danube were only passible by a small bridge, at which he kept up a vigorous fire from behind the ditches both with cannon and small arms, it did not prevent the second battalion of Gyulay, immediately after the first had penetrated as far as the bushy meadows, to pass the bridge in a column, to form without delay, and with charged bayonets to attack the enemy, who precipitately retreated to Aspern, on which occasion that village, after a vigorous, but not very obstinate resistance, was taken for the first time. It was, however, not long before the enemy had it in his power, by the arrival of fresh reinforcements, to expel again the battalions of Gyulay. By this time some battalions of the column had arrived, the chasseurs of major Schneider, of the second column, joined the advanced guard of the first; Gyulay formed again, and the enemy was a second time pushed to the lower end of the village, though he succeeded again in regaining what he had lost.

Both parties were aware of the necessity of maintaining themselves in Aspern at any rate, which produced successively the most obstinate efforts both of attack and defence; the parties engaged each other in every street, in every house, and in every barn; carts, ploughs and harrows were obliged to be removed during an uninterrupted fire, in order to get at the enemy; every individual was an impediment of the assailants, and a rampart of the attacked; the steeple, lofty trees, the garrets and the cellars were to be conquered before either of the parties could stile itself master of the place, and yet the possession was ever of short duration; for no sooner had we taken a street or a house, than the enemy gained another forcing us to abandon the former. So this murderous conflict lasted for several hours; the German battalions were supported by Hungarians, who were again assisted by Vienna volunteers, each rivalling the other in courage and perseverance. At the same time the second column combined its attacks with those of the first, having to overcome the resistance, by reason of the enemy's constantly leading fresh reinforcements into fire. At length gen. Bacquant of the second column succeeded in becoming master of the upper part of the village, and maintaining himself there during the whole night.

By the shells of both parties, many houses had been set on fire, and illuminated the whole country round.

At the extremity of the right wing on the bushy meadow, the combats were not less severe. The left flank of the enemy was secured by an arm of the Danube; impenetrable underwood, intersected only by foot paths, covered his front; and a broad ditch and pallisadoes afforded him the advantage of a natural rampart.

Here fought at the beginning of the battle the 1st battalion of Gyulay under col. Mariassy; and the battalion of chasseurs under maj. Schneider; next the St. Georgians under maj, Mihaillovich; and finally, the two battalions of Vienna volunteers under lieut. col. Steigentesch and St. Quentin. Here, also, the enemy was defeated; and the first day of this sanguinary engagement terminated by the occupation of Aspern by general Bacquant, at the head of eight battalions of the second column, while lieut. field marshal Hiller drew the troops of his corps from the village, placed them again in order of battle, and passed the night under arms.

Second Column.

The advanced guard, commanded by lieut. gen. Fresnel, advanced by Leopoldau and Kagran towards Hirschstetten, and consisted of one battalion of chasseurs, and two battalions of Anton Mitsovsky under gen. Winzingerode, as well as the brigades of cavalry, Klenau and Vincent, under gen. Veesey. It was followed in the same direction by the column from its position near Gerasdorf.

The enemy having been discovered from the eminences near Hirschstetten to be near Aspern and Esslingen, the brigade Veesey was detached against the latter place, and the brigade Winzingerode to dislodge the enemy from Aspern.

The column deployed before Hirschstetten in two lines, in order to support the advanced guard, and leaving Aspern on the right, followed upon the plain, at a proper distance.

The brigade of Winzingerode, however, met with so spirited a resistance in its attempts upon Aspern, that an attack on the front alone was not likely to be attended with success; the cavalry, therefore, of the advanced guard, was pushed forward from Aspern on the left, in order to support the attack on the flank with the two batteries of cavalry, as well as to facilitate the junction with the third column, which was advancing by Brietenlee. At the same time the regiment of Reuss-Plaun was ordered to take the right side of Aspern, with a view to attack on that place, the rest of the corps was formed into close columns of battalions.

Meanwhile the enemy formed his left wing, which he refused towards Aspern, and his right upon Esslingen. Thus he advanced with columns of infantry and cavalry upon the main army, while an extremely brisk cannonade supported him. A line of twelve regiments of cuirrasiers formed the centre of the second line of the enemy, giving to the whole an imposing aspect.

Meanwhile the attack of a battalion of Reuss-Plauen of Aspern was repulsed, and it gave way, being thrown into consternation by the loss of its commander, but it rallied immediately after. Count Bellegarde ordered gen. Bacquant to renew the attack with the regiment of Vogesaug, and to carry the village at all hazards. The latter obeyed the order with the most brilliant success, and Aspern, though defended by twelve thousand of the best of the enemy's troops, was carried by storm; Bacquant being assisted by the regiment of Reuss-Plauen, by a battalion of archduke Rainer, and by the brigade of Mair of the third column.

To frustrate this attack, the enemy advanced with two columns of infantry, supported by his heavy cavalry upon the main army, repulsed the regiments of Klenau and Vincent's light horse, and fell upon the infantry.

The latter expecting him with their firelocks ready, and with cool intrepidity, fired at ten paces distance so effectually, as totally to route the enemy, upon which gen. Veesey, at the head of a division of Klenau, attacked the enemy's cuirrassiers with such energy that their retreat was followed by that of the infantry.

Hereby the army along the whole of its line was disengaged from the enemy, obtained communication on the left with the corps of prince Hohenzollern, and became possessed of the important post of Aspern. The enemy being in full retreat, attempted no further attack, and confined himself merely to a cannonade. The corps remained during the night under arms. The enemy repeated, indeed, his attacks on Aspern, but they all proved unsuccessful.

Third Column.

This column, according to its destination, had began its march from its position at Sciering, by the road of Sussenbrunn and Breitenlee. Some divisions of O'Reilly's light horse and chasseurs formed the advanced guard of the column, and at three o'clock in the afternoon met near Hirschstetten, the left wing of the enemy, which consisted mostly of cavalry.

As about this time the first and second columns advanced intrepidly upon Aspern, and the enemy began to fall back to his position between Esslingen and Aspern, lieut. gen. Hohenzollern ordered up his batteries, and a very brisk cannonade commenced on both sides.

The first line formed in close columns of battalions, and advanced with the greatest resolution upon the enemy, when his cavalry suddenly rushed forward in such disproportionate numbers, and with such rapidity, that there was scarcely time to save the artillery which had been brought up, and the battalions left to defend themselves by their own unsupported exertions. This was the remarkable moment in which the regiments of Zach, Jos. Colloredo, Zettwitz, Froon, a battalion of Stein's, and the second battalion of the archduke Charles's legion, under the conduct of lieut. gen. Brady, and generals Buresch, Meier, and Koller, demonstrated with unparalleled fortitude, what the fixed determination to conquer or die is capable of effecting against the most impetuous attacks.

The enemy's cavalry turned these battalions on both wings, penetrated between them, repulsed the squadrons of O'Rielly's light horse, who were unable to withstand such a superior force, and in the confidence of victory, summoned these corps of heroes to lay down their arms. A well directed and destructive fire was the answer to this degrading proposition, and the enemy's cavalry abandoned the field, leaving behind them a considerable number of dead.

This corps, as well as the others, passed the night on the field of battle.

FROM LONDON PAPERS,
Received at the office of the New York, Gazette, by the schooner Eliza and Caty, captain Bradford, from Dundee.

THE HAGUE, July 6.

The Moniteur and other Paris papers of the 2d contain nothing important. On the day before, the senate had held an extraordinary sitting, but what took place is unknown. Some persons affirm that his majesty the emperor and king made communications of the utmost importance.

BANKS OF THE WESER, July 1.
(Extract of a letter.)

"In the neighborhood of Presburg, the Austrians have established a bridge over the Danube, defended by a tete-de-pont, near Wolfsthal, which marshal Davoust attacked in vain, with 10,000 men. The Austrian general Blanchi repulsed his attacks.

"In Poland, the fortune of war has declared in favor of the Polish troops under prince Poniatowsky, who is reported to have been joined by a column of Russians under a general Suwarrow; but the reigning duke of Oldenburg, who was in the neighborhood two days ago, is said to have dropt very broad hints that Russia would not act seriously against the Austrians. The news of the success of the archduke Charles on the Danube, had reached St. Petersburg before his departure, and created such a tumultuous joy among the lower orders in the Russian capital, that the French ambassador complained to Alexander, who replied, that it was the voice of the people, which he was unable to control.

"The expected conflict between the two grand armies had not taken place on the 20th June. The last letters from Vienna of that date report, that Bonaparte finding himself straitened with respect to provisions had applied to the Austrian emperor and the archduke Charles, in behalf of the inhabitants of Vienna, and met with an absolute refusal. It is therefore expected, that the scarcity which prevails in his camp will force him to attack the entrenched Austrian camp on the other side of the Danube.

"Marshal Lefebvre had still his headquarters, on the 13th of June, at Lintz, at the head of two divisions of the Bavarian troops, commanded by the crown prince of Bavaria, and G. Wrede.

"In Saxony, the Austrians and the corps under the young duke of Brunswick Oels, were on the 21st of June in the neighborhood of Leipsig and Halle; their vanguards reached Morseburg and Weissenfels. Jerome Bonaparte was with a few of his own troops and a regiment of the grand duke of Berg's cavalry, at Mithlhausen on the 19th. The Dutch, under general Gratsen, their head quarters at Halberstadt, on 21st.

NEW-ORLEANS, July 16.

The following is a brief sketch of a tra action, which occurred when on a late v at the camp of Terre-au-Bœuf:

On the 10th instant, a Lieut. Christ of the 7th regiment, reported to Lieut. B of the same corps, that a general revolt intended as soon as the men had rece their pay, and that the plan extended fr right to left. He mentioned several na and among them are Corporal Donald of the 5th regiment, and a private by name of Arbunkle, of the 7th regime and particularized Hogan the serjeant m jor of Dragoons, as the proposed lead who is said to be a British deserter. T report reached the general's ear the mo ing of the 11th, and measures were imm diately adopted to ascertain the grounds which it rested.

In the course of the day and night, sa factory evidence was obtained, that a volt was in agitation, and that a paper been circulated for signers. The ge had heard that an overt act was neces to constitute treason and to justify act tion; but he reflected that if he shou this instance wait for the act, the act might perhaps enter the plea of justi tion, and put his authority and the law defiance—he therefore resolved, as on former occasion, to anticipate the consp tors.

On the morning of the 12th, the ball c tridges were returned by the troops, and guards were strengthened. The line p raded in the evening, the light artillery the right, loaded with cannister and light matches—the rolls being called and the o ders read, three sergeants, one corporal a four privates were drawn out and commit to the front guard, under an impressive lence, and a scene of obvious alarm fr right to left. Picquets of confidential m were turned out in the course of the ev ing, and the officers emulated each other vigilance, determined to lose their lives extinguish the combination in its dawn.

On the 13th the enclosed order was is ed and a general court martial was order to try the offenders. I left camp this mo ing, where every thing was tranquil.

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

We learn verbally from a gentleman passenger in a vessel arrived off Sandy-Hook, from a port in Ireland, whence she sailed about the 23d of July, that the grand expedition sailed from England on the 17th of July; that there were a general embargo in England; the Russian and French armies had formed a junction; and negociations for a peace were said to be in a train of forwardness between France and Austria.
[N. Y. M. Adv.

Bonaparte, in one of his bulletins, ordered that the Austrian field marshal CHASTELLAR, if taken, should be executed as a brigand. In consequence, the Austrian Emperor has notified Napoleon, that Derousnel and Foulers as well as other French general officers should be held as hostages for the personal safety of the field marshal should the chance of war put him in the power of the French.

Iron Crown.—The crown of the king of the Italians or the Romans, is called the iron crown. Why it was so denominated we know not, unless it was in allusion to the prophecy in the book of Daniel, which declared that the fourth kingdom, meaning that of the Romans, should be "strong as iron." Napoleon made himself king of the Romans and possessor of the iron crown, upon which it seems there is inscribed this motto, "God has given it to me, woe to him that touches it." And he concludes his late proclamation after the defeat of the Austrian army in Italy, with repeating the motto aforementioned. Napoleon ought to have reflected, however, that God in his providence had also given the iron crown to the prince from whom he wrested it, and that the woe denounced in the motto, strictly applies to himself.

COPENHAGEN, July 15.

On the 7th of July 10 English vessels of war landed 400 men at Cuxhaven and Ritzbuttel of which places they immediately took possession. It is said that the English have also landed some troops at Bremerlehe. On the 11th of July 18 English armed vessels were seen to lay off the mouth of the Elbe, apparently with troops on board. They have razed the fort of Ritzbuttle. The duke of Brunswick, Oels, is still in Saxony.

LONDON, July 13.

The Mosquito schr. and a small squadron from Heligoland, have driven the French out of Cuxhaven demolished the batteries, and forced the municipality to lay down the buoys in the Elbe which the French had taken up. Our presence is ardently desired in that part of Germany, and hopes are entertained that our expedition is destined thither.

On mutual condescension.—In the crowded streets of a great city, where multitude, of people are passing in opposite directionss whilst some are crossing the streets obliquely, and some at right angles, it is necessary for every one to give way a little to those he meets; and thus they all have a free passage. If the whole multitude should press on directly onward, without any one's yielding an inch of ground to another, all would be obstructed, more or less, and a general confusion must ensue. Or if a churlish individual should take it in his head to march forward in a strait line, and never make way for man, woman, or child, or even for a procession, he would be sure to jostle against somebody, every few steps; and would receive many an insult, and, perhaps, some hard blows for his obstinacy and impudence.

And so it is, my fellow-travellers, in our journey through life, and in respect to our general intercourse with mankind. "In the march of life no one's path lies so clear as not in some degree to cross anothers; and and if each is determined, with unyielding sturdiness, to keep his own line, it is impossible but he must both give and receive many a rude shock." In society, in neighborhoods, and even among close friends, there will spring up rivalries, there will be sometimes a clashing of opinion and of interest, and if every one were mulishly obstinate, there would be no end nor bounds to contention; whereas by the exercise of mutual condescension, social harmony is preserved, and the pleasures of society are enjoyed.

The exercise of condescension is ranked amongst the precepts of the gospel, and is enjoined as a duty upon christians, who are told from divine authority, to "be patient towards all men," to "be courteous."—— Hence it follows, that the ever obstinate man who will not yield an ace in matters of interest or opinion, but runs foul of every one that chances to cross his path, does really transgess the rules of the gospel, as well as those of decorum.

Here not let me be misunderstood Condescension has its bounds, and those bounds are strongly marked. One should never yield opinions, much less principles, that are of great and serious importance. One should never sacrifice conscience to please friends, or for fear of foes. One should never "follow a multitude to do evil." One should never suffer himself to be conformed to the world in vicious practices and customs, or in fashions, which, although innocent in themselves, are too expensive for him to follow. One should never yield any thing to importunity, which self-justice forbids him to yield at all. In these points the person who would go through the journey of life well, must be firm and inflexible. But in matters of indifference, or of no serious consequence, whether respecting opinion or interest, a yielding accommodating spirit is not only desirable, but is a moral and christian duty. And even in points which are not to be yielded, one should maintain firmness in such a manner, if possible, as to make it evident that he acts from principle rather from obstinacy.

In act 2d. will be performed by the Orchestra, the celebrated

Scotch Battle MUSIC, called the Piebrach,

For the assembling the Clans of the Campbells and Macleans.

Act 2d. Scene 3d. A view of the Sea: almost total darkness; rains and peals of thunder at intervals, preceded by flashes of lightning, by the light of which the Lady is discovered on the Rock, wringing her hands and waving her handkerchief; after some time a Fisherman and his Son are seen by lightning at sea, endeavoring to gain the rock, but seemingly in vain, the storm encreases, and the boat appears to be overwhelmed by the waves.

Scene 4th. The Highlands. Gathering;—that is, the sounding to arms is heard in many places; men quickly appear on the mountains clothed in the Scotch costume. The different clans of the Campbells and the Macleans collect, and gradually encrease in numbers. The Piebrach, or warlike music, appertaining to each clan, is played as they seperately march.

Mock Funeral of Lady Maclean. Both parties prepare for the assault. Lady Maclean enters, her Lord receives her in his arms. Both parties sheathe their swords and become friends.

Domestic Manufactures.

THE subscriber proposes erecting at the Centre Mills, near Alexandria, a Machine for carding Wool, and expects to have it ready to run by the 30th of the present month. It will card the wool and form it into rolls for the spinning wheel, or into batts for hatters, or other purposes. The advantage of having wool prepared by these machines for the purpose of manufacturing into yarn over that which is carded by hand, is generally acknowledged, as being the cheapest and most perfect in its operation. Those persons who may incline to give encouragement to this establishment, may depend on the utmost punctuality as to time and unremitted attention in the execution of the work. The wool when carded into rolls will be packed in such manner as to preserve it in the most perfect state for spinning, and may be transported any reasonable distance without injury. Wool, sent to the carder, must be clean washed, clear of burrs, small sticks or other extraneous matter, and assorted in such manner as may suit the owner; and each quality shall be kept seperate. The expence of carding will be eight cents for that which is made into rolls, and five cents for batts per lb. payable at the time of delivering, or payment will be received in wool of good quality at 40 cents per pound, as may suit the convenience of the owner.

DIRECTIONS HOW TO USE
YARWOOD'S
Patent Washing Machine.

First fill the barrel half full of your finest cloths, than fill the bottom of the Reservoir with hot suds up to the side planks, turn the Crank backwards and forwards so as to make the cloaths fall the hardest against the sides of the barrel for about twenty-five minutes, then use the same suds with a little more soap and hot water for the next finest cloaths, until the suds are unfit for use, then second your cloaths in the same way with boiling suds, after rubbing a little soap on the dirtiest parts of the cloaths; then rince them in the machine in warm or cold water.

VALUABLE LAND

FOR SALE,

Distant 23 miles from Georgetown and Alexandria, 19 miles from Occoquan Mills, and twenty from Dumfries, and within two miles and a half of the Little River Turnpike Road. It consists of Five and Twenty Hundred acres, lying on the waters of Bull and Little Rocky runs, in the counties of Fairfax and Prince William. The quality of this land is excellent, and, to a grazier especially, would be a source of great emolument, from the quantity of low grounds: of which there is not less than Five hundred acres, ready, from the strength of the soil, to be sowed in Timothy. This land is decidedly benefitted by the plaister of Paris. On it is a very good scite for a mill, the stream being one of the most constant in that part of the country. There are about 800 acres in wood, heavily timbered. The improvements are, a dwelling house newly fitted up, consisting of two rooms below stairs, with a store room and two convenient closets three lodging rooms above stairs, an excellent cellar, a kitchen, corn house, meat house and stables. Likewise the overseer's house, one in each county, with other necessary houses or negroes, &c.

Between 2 and 300 acres in addition, for sale, in Prince William county, on Bull Run near its conflux with Occoquan. This land lies about 10 or 11 miles from the Occoquan mills, and has nearly one third in woods—its quality is equal to any in its immediate neighborhood.

Persons disposed to purchase may be supplied on the first named tract with a large stock of horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, farming utensils. The subscriber willing to emigrate southwardly will dispose of the above mentioned property on the most reasonable terms.

Information respecting the property may be had by application to the honorable Judge Washington of Mount Vernon, H. S. Turner, Esquire, of Jefferson county, or in the absence of the subscriber to Bernard Hooe, jun. Esq. living near the premises:

The Commonwealth of Virginia

To the Sheriff of county, GREETING:

YOU are hereby commanded to summon Elisha Janney, Jacob Janney, Philip Care, Bernard Hooe, jun. Philip Slaughter, and Fleming Bates, to appear at the Capitol, in the city of Richmond, on the first day of the next term, before the Judge of the Superior Court of Chancery, directed by law to be holden in the said city, to answer a bill exhibited against them in the said court, by Jas Green. And this they shall in no wise omit, under the penalty of 100*l.* each. And have then there this writ. Witness Peter Tinsley, clerk of our said Court at Richmond, this 26th day of June, 1809, and, in the 33d year of the commonwealth.

Peter Tinsley, c. c.

To restrain in the hands of the defendants Jacob Janney, Philip Care, Bernard Hooe, junior, Philip Slaughter and Fleming Bates, any money, debts, or effects in their hands belonging, or due to, the defendant Elisha Janney, an absent defendant, until the further order of the court.

Edmund I. Lee,
For the Complainant.

Teste.
